

MOORE STEPHENS

CHARTERED ACCOUNTANTS

As a firm we are able to update our clients as quickly as possible... It makes us more efficient, knowledgeable and professional as a result

Moore Stephens' requirements

Moore Stephens is the 10th largest tax and accountancy firm in London employing 570 partners and staff. It has built its business by developing expertise in specific industry sectors. This has enabled the practice to provide an innovative and personal service to its niche markets, which include insurance and financial services, as well as its global corporate interests.

Clients have access to a range of assurance and advisory services, including audit and accounting, business and systems assurance, taxation, business, financial and IT consulting, corporate finance, corporate recovery, financial services and wealth management and litigation support.

What did LexisNexis offer?

LexisNexis suggested a package of tax and insolvency menus from the award winning online service LexisNexis Butterworths. Included in this online package were: Simon's Direct Tax Service, De Voil Indirect Tax Service, Yellow and Orange Tax Handbooks, Tolley's Tax Annuals and the Inland Revenue Manuals.

How did Moore Stephens benefit?

Practice librarian Alan Lewis, a fully trained chartered librarian of 30-years' experience, has noticed a major change in the way he and the business operates since the system was installed.

"One of the major advantages it has brought has been the breadth and depth of information that is now available, and, of course, it is instantly up to date, which wasn't always true of the hard copy volumes that we used to rely on," he says.

"Speed of use is probably the number one advantage of installing the system, while the ability of anyone within the firm, regardless of their position, to go in and pull down the information they need instantly, without resorting to hard copy or other websites, is another major plus. The information is all there, in one place for you!"

"As a firm, that means we are able to update our clients as quickly as possible on any major legislative or fiscal changes that may affect them. It makes us more efficient, knowledgeable and professional as a result."

The online tax service from LexisNexis allows everyone to have a tax library on their own desk...

The information is all there, in one place for you!

Alan Lewis, Moore Stephens