Contents

Searching across your entire subscription ................................................................. 1
Working with your results .......................................................................................... 2
Finding authority as cited by your lecturer ............................................................. 3
Cases ......................................................................................................................... 3
Legislation .................................................................................................................. 5
Journal articles ......................................................................................................... 8
Pure Legal Research .................................................................................................. 8
Research Case Law ..................................................................................................... 11
Using Halsbury’s Laws of England/Stair Memorial Encyclopaedia ......................... 13
Using your Halsbury’s/Stair Results .......................................................................... 15
Searching across your entire subscription

You can use this search box to search across your whole LexisLibrary and LexisPSL (where applicable) subscription. Later in this guide, you will be taught on how to use search connectors; you do not have to employ any of these in this search box. It supports natural language, so you can type in a series of key words/phrases and simply search.
Working with your results

Lexis Recommends will conveniently pop up if it recognises any key words or phrases in your search.

Use the filters to the left of the search results to narrow by content type (here you can also see results from lexis PSL – subscription dependant), filter by an additional key word, select a particular publication and sort by legal topic.
Finding authority as cited by your lecturer

Cases

Enter the case name (e.g. Patel v Mirza) or citation ([2015] Ch 271 would be entered as 2015 ch 271)
You will be linked to the Case Overview result. This will provide:

1. After search by case name or citation, you will be able to choose a particular judgement or one of our case overview pages. These contain:
   2. Links to all of the available law reports – click on a link to open the law report
   3. The appeal history of the case (where applicable)
   4. The cases considered in reaching the judgment
   5. Subsequent which have since referred to this case

Remember referring to the appellate history, cases considered and subsequent cases demonstrates deeper research and can significantly improve your grade.
You can view a PDF of the law report as it appeared in the original print volume. This is particularly important as it provides the lettered paragraphs—lecturers are impressed if you cite these e.g. [2015] Ch 271 at p 275 para d.

The Find out more box links you to related Case law, Commentary (practitioner text books) and Journal articles as appropriate. Using these links is a great way to improve your grades and save you research time.

Legislation

Enter the Legislation title into the Legislation Field

You must tick the SI box to return secondary legislation results

To find Welsh Assembly Acts & Measures you need to un-tick both the Act and SI box

If you want to find the Primary Legislation and the associated Secondary Legislation you need to tick both Act and SI box

To search for a specific section enter the title followed by the section number e.g.

Equality Act 2010 s6
If you have not searched for a specific section you will see one result for each section of the Act/SI Click on to the title result

You will now see the arrangement of the Act/SI and from here you can link to your specific section

The Find out more box links you to Case law, Commentary, Journal articles and Subordinate Legislation for the Act as a whole. It is better to link from a specific section to focus your results
Use the Table of Contents button to move quickly between sections of the Act/SI you are viewing.

Click on the Golden Nugget to Words and Phrases Judicially Considered. This lists all of the definitions the courts have applied to the wording of the Act and links to that Case law. This will help you improve your marks.

If you need to see how the Legislation looked at a past point in time you can use the Historical Version links.
Journal articles

Pure Legal Research

These tips will help you when you have to research from first principles

1. Identify the key words and phrases in your coursework/seminar question. For example if my question read “A pregnant woman may not be made redundant. Discuss” I would need to search using terms like pregnant, maternity, redundancy
2. Build these into a search strand using the connectors below
3. You are now ready to use your search strand on LexisLibrary

You can search by
a. Citation e.g. 157 nlj 248
b. Author e.g. Ruth Costigan
c. Title e.g. Are digital natives equipped to conquer the legal landscape
d. Key word e.g. Unfair dismissal
Searching all content (Cases, Legislation, Commentary and Journals) simultaneously

1. From the home page select the General tab

Enter your search strand in the Search terms box

You can also Add topics to search to focus your results on your topic area. Use the little pluses to open up the subtopic options
You can work with all of your results simultaneously or you can select particular document types, publications, topics or add additional keywords.

Top tip. You can create an alert which will automatically re-run your search and email you if there are new results using the Create an alert link. This is an excellent way to demonstrate you are keeping up to date with the development of the law and will help increase your grades.
Top tip. If you are researching the approach of a particular Judge (e.g. Lord Denning) or are preparing for an interview use the Judge or Counsel boxes to find all the cases heard by that Judge/represented by the barrister, solicitor or firm you are researching.

The Summary box will only look for your words and phrases within the Catchwords and Headnote of a case. This is a far more focused search and should be used for broad legal concepts e.g. murder and mens rea.

You can restrict your search to a particular date range. This can help improve your marks as you can demonstrate the attitude of the courts in the current climate.

The Search terms box will look for your words and phrases anywhere within the entire Law Report or Judgment (transcript). This is the widest search and should be used when looking for unusual fact patterns. You can also Add topics to search to further filter your results.

Click on the Cases tab to research case law.
Finding Commentary

You will need to select the Commentary tab from the home page. Using practitioner texts is a great way to improve your grades; everyone will cite their student textbook but practitioner texts show you are able to conduct proper legal research.

The Heading box will only search for your words and phrases within the chapter titles and sub-titles. This will focus your search and is useful when looking to find the primary rules in an area.

The Search terms box will look for your words and phrases anywhere within the book. This is the widest search and should be used when conducting detailed research.
Using Halsbury’s Laws of England/Stair Memorial Encyclopaedia

Halsbury’s Laws of England is an encyclopaedia of the law in England and Wales. It provides unbiased commentary on how the law operates in these jurisdiction and provides links through to associated legislation, case law and further reading. Stair Memorial Encyclopaedia provides the same information but in relation to Scotland.

Both publications work in the same way. The guide below takes screenshots from Halsbury’s but the same techniques should be applied to Stair for Scottish users.

To search the publication click on the Search link and use the “Finding Commentary” techniques (above)

The Index will allow you to see all the content relating to a particular legal term. From your bookshelf click on the Browse link
1. Click on the little plus to open the tree for that letter.

2. Click on the word you require e.g. Easement

3. You will be presented with a list of results for your term. Simply select the one you need
Using your Halsbury’s/Stair Results

If there is an Update box make sure you click on it. This will reveal all of the update information you will need to consider including case law and legislation which affects the information in the main text. This is very important if there has been a change in the law.

The Legal Terms box will link you to associated terms. Select these to access a definition, key case law, key legislation and key commentary relating to the term.

The location box tells you all the information you need to accurately cite Halsbury’s/Stair in your essays.